Challenge the future

Conference Themes

- Port planning
- Terminal design
- Structural solutions
- Hinterland connections

all with special emphasis on climate change and sustainability.

Program

In conjunction with the Seminar there will be a display of recent R&D and technological results, systems and services for the port industry.

Prior to the Seminar, on 21 June, there is the opportunity to visit Futureland, the visitor centre for the new port development Maasvlakte 2, and the ongoing works (www.futureland.nl).

In the beginning of 2010 a Second Announcement will present more information on the Program. Up-to-date information on the Seminar can be found on the website www.portseminar2010.tudelft.nl.

Professor Han Ligteringen

The closing of the Seminar will be combined with the Valedictory Address of professor Han Ligteringen, Chair of Ports and Waterways within the Faculty of Civil Engineering and Geo-sciences of the Delft University of Technology.

Call for Papers Deadline: 1 February 2010

The Seminar offers a platform to contribute to trend-setting innovative concepts and practices and aims to bring together researchers, institutes of science, consultants and practitioners in the port and maritime industries to share developments and to exchange views and experiences.

If you want to participate in this Seminar and present a paper, please send your abstract of max. 300 words to portseminar2010@tudelft.nl before 1 February, 2010.

Authors will be notified by the Seminar secretariat by 1 March 2010 on the acceptance of the papers and the further details of the paper submission.
